MAYE

SHAKTI WARRIORS

MAYE

Maye was both the youngest of five sisters. Her parents were the most powerful members of their Native American Indian tribe. Each of her sisters were born with a birthmark tattoo. They had a different symbol for each of the four elements- wind, fire, earth and water. Maye was born with a tattoo of an eagle on her shoulder. The tribal leaders gasped at her birth.

They said - "Each child of the elements will remain with us for her entire life. Only little Maye will fly from us. Maye will be wise and powerful like the eagle. One day she will enter the outside world. There she will pass on the teachings of the animals to her new world."

While her sisters control the elements of earth, wind, fire and water, Maye spend her days deep in the woods communicating with animals. They tell her stories of their ventures into the outside world.

They speak of worldly developments: automobiles, skyscrapers, technology, and more. They tell her of the fighting between nations. They talk about the anger of the elements and of the negative forces that are causing Chaos in the world. She listens with compassion. Although she has a strong desire to make a difference, she fights the prophecy. She continues to practice the ways of her tribe.
